Project Description

The goal of the U.S. Study Abroad Branch is to increase diversity and participation in study abroad among U.S. students.

We do this by managing our scholarship programs, building capacity for study abroad at U.S. and foreign institutions, aggregating resources from U.S. federal agencies and foreign governments on our website, and demonstrating the value of studying abroad. To do this work, we need the latest higher education news, events, and information on our website.

You will support our mission by researching and analyzing news related to studying abroad for the website, find events relevant to students and the higher education community, and you will serve as a moderator and community manager for a forthcoming community for higher education professionals on our website.

We are looking for someone with community management skills, an interest in international education, and good judgment.
