Project Description

Each state has specific documents with nuisances and specific guidance that are unique to each state and describe that state’s process is to get through environmental review. This includes agency requirements, contacts, and unique state quirks; all must be reviewed, researched, and updated to be appropriate and meet national requirements. Most of these documents were created or last updated many years ago and do not reflect newer technologies and regulations. We need you to help us bring these documents into the new millenium!

Skills:

- Persistence in untangling confusing regulations and guidance from state agencies
- Ability to understand complex regulations and how multiple requirements interact with each other
- Clear communication via the written word
- Ability to clarify complex requirements into easy to follow guidance and an understanding of why to simply refer back to experts
